

Can I erect a sign for my business?

Subject to site location, planning history and particulars, some signage may not require planning permission. However there are many classes of signage with a large number of thresholds/limits which apply to each, all of which are very specific. Planning permission is required in many instances and in particular for digital or electronic signage which may present a traffic safety hazard to the public. It is strongly recommended that you seek advice prior to erecting any signage.