

Can a change of use be exempted development?

Where a change of use is not "material", planning permission is not required. The planning authority can give advice on whether it considers any particular change of use is significant enough to be "material" for planning purposes.