

An aerial photograph of a large port facility. In the foreground, there are several large white industrial buildings with blue roofs. A paved area is filled with various pieces of heavy machinery, including cranes and trucks. A long green barge is docked at the pier, with a large white cylindrical object being moved by a crane. In the background, several large ships are docked at the pier, and a body of water is visible. The sky is clear and blue.

Killybegs Harbour

Killybegs is a modern, vibrant and forward looking harbour operation. Located South of County Donegal in the North West of Ireland, it is well placed for servicing off-shore energy exploration and the development of renewable energies along Ireland's West Coast and indeed Europe's Western approaches.

Killybegs has deep water all-weather harbour infrastructure along with world-class hydraulic, mechanical and other key services which play a pivotal role in the development of off-shore energy. Killybegs is also home to a number of innovative and cutting-edge firms involved in a range of sectors.

The town of Killybegs has a proud maritime heritage. Developed initially as a fishing port, it has since 1999, played an important role in facilitating the off-shore exploration and in particular the development of the Corrib Field. It has also been the harbour of choice for wind farm developers by facilitating the delivery of wind turbines for wind farms throughout the north and west of Ireland.

In a further development Killybegs has become the port of call of many cruise ships who benefit from modern berthing and quayside facilities along with direct access to the Highlands of Donegal.

Plans are also in place for the development of a strategic, innovative hub for marine resources including offshore renewable energies, added value seafood and marine tourism.

Killybegs in essence has evolved into a multi functional port serving the fishing, energy and cruise sectors. Therefore the presence of this expertise, adaptability and flexibility ensures that Killybegs can meet any challenge. A "can do" attitude pervades.

“Shell E&P Ireland Ltd. (SEPIL) have run their West of Ireland offshore logistics operations from Killybegs since 2005. We have used the port for drilling, subsea operations, pipe storage and other development work and our experience with Killybegs has been second to none. Whilst the port provides all the expected services e.g. stevedoring, refuelling, waste management etc, the extensive facilities and expertise readily available have proven to be absolutely first class.”

We have found the Killybegs workforce to be professional, committed and interested in the needs of the client. Most importantly, the workforce have shared our enthusiasm and dedication to Health, Safety and The Environment (HSE). This has resulted in an excellent safety culture and HSE track record. SEPIL is proud to have contributed to the growth of this great facility.”

Terry Nolan, Managing Director, Shell E&P Ireland Limited.

The port of Killybegs is designated as one of the country's six Fishery Harbour Centres and is operated by the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine who are responsible for the management, maintenance and development of the port and its facilities. Killybegs port is also a base for a wide range of marine activity and services.

Letterkenny Institute of Technology (LYIT) is the first college in Ireland to offer two programmes in Wind Energy Technology.

Higher Certificate in Wind Energy Technology

Minor Award in Wind Energy Technology

Both programmes have an element of practical and theoretical education and training. The courses are delivered in both the Killybegs campus and Letterkenny campuses.

LYIT has a 27m Turbine Training Tower on its Killybegs Campus and it is the only GL approved training tower in Ireland. Wind Turbine Technicians are required to undergo Climbing and High Rescue training on an annual basis. This tower will facilitate that training for both our students and industry. LYIT has two 250kW Turbine Nacelles and Rotor Blades for two of their training workshops. The rotor blade repair workshop and turbine repair workshop are approximately 500m² and are located in Killybegs near the main Killybegs Campus at the Wind Energy Centre. Since its opening in 2011 some 76 graduates have found fulltime work in the industry and the graduates of the programme are highly regarded by the sector.

Having signed an education provider agreement with BZEE, the German Centre for Renewable Technology, LYIT is the only approved and accredited college to provide their Wind Energy Service Technician programmes in Ireland. BZEE's programme has the endorsement and approval of most of the major European manufacturers that supply Ireland with wind turbines for electricity generation. Furthermore it is the only education and training programme currently for wind service technicians with worldwide recognition.

The School of Tourism at LYIT, originally known as Tourism College Killybegs has over 40 years experience of producing talented and skilled graduates for the tourism industry both in Ireland and abroad. Courses on offer range from short certificate programmes to degree level; offering qualifications in food production, leisure, heritage, hospitality and tourism.
