Genealogy is the study of one’s ancestors or family history and is one of the most popular hobbies in the world. Genealogy makes history come alive because when people learn about their ancestors, they are able to make connections to historical events. Family History is the biographical research into your ancestors. The aim is typically to produce a well-documented narrative history, of interest to family members and perhaps future generations. It involves putting flesh on the skeleton of what is produced by genealogy and involves the study of the historical circumstances and geographical situation in which ancestors lived.

As custodians of the collective memory of County Donegal, genealogy/ family history resources are an important Culture Division service. This booklet was produced by the Library, Archives and Museum Services of the Culture Division, Donegal County Council to provide a brief introduction to resources available within these services and to other resources and agencies that can help to guide researchers in tracing their Donegal family tree.

While Donegal County Library, Donegal County Archives and the Donegal County Museum are happy to provide guidance and assistance, they are not genealogical institutions and in general they cannot conduct detailed research for individuals.
Beginning your Research

To begin, try to establish as accurately and completely as possible the basic genealogical facts of as many of your near relatives as you can:

- names (forenames and related family names)
- places of residence (the parish or townland in which they lived, see: www.townlands.ie/donegal/) A townland is the smallest territorial division within each county and can range in size between one and several thousand acres. They have been used extensively in land surveys, censuses and polling systems since the 17th century and are the basis for rural postal addresses
- approximate date and place of birth/baptism
- date and place of marriage
- date and place of death/burial.

It is best to work backwards from known information about already-identified ancestors. Trying to work forwards rarely works. Talk to your immediate family and ask questions of those you think might know a little bit more about your family history. Check to find what documents (certificates, letters, newspaper cuttings, family bibles, photograph albums, diaries, etc.) you or they possess. This information will point the way to relevant records. Religious denomination is also important in determining which records are relevant to your research.
Researching your Irish ancestry is limited by the fact that many census records, family genealogies and Church of Ireland parish registers were destroyed when the National Archive in the Four Courts in Dublin was burnt in 1922. However, Roman Catholic parish registers mainly survive, though few date back beyond the end of the 18th century and are not available for all parishes. There are various other records, but it is difficult to trace an Irish line further back than the early 17th century, unless through Clan records etc.

There are numerous books and online sources that can assist you to begin your research including:

The Central Library, Letterkenny, houses an extensive collection of books, journals and other materials on genealogy and family history that can help you get started on your search for that elusive Donegal ancestor.

While the staff is unable to carry out the research, they are happy to provide guidance and assistance.

It is possible to photocopy many of our resources; where there are exceptions these can usually be photographed without a flash. All photocopying must comply with the Copyright and Related Rights Act 2000.
The Donegal Studies is located in the Central Library, Letterkenny. The reference collection is available during library opening hours and some items are available for loan. The catalogue is available online at www.donegallibrary.ie

A member of staff is always present to provide guidance and assistance and to bring the materials to the researcher. If you feel that you would need to access microfilmed materials it is advisable to book the microreader in advance.
Donegal County Library is in the process of digitising selected items from the Donegal Studies collection and is prioritising items to be digitised to meet the needs of researchers, while aiming to preserve the most delicate and at risk items in their collections. This will allow their collections to become more accessible via web and other formats to users both at home and abroad.

Sources and Resources Available at Central Library include:

LAND RECORDS

Census and Census Substitutes
The Census Returns list all those present in the household on the night of the census, their relationship to the householder, religion, occupation, age and other personal details.

1901 and 1911 Census
Microfilm copies of both the 1901 and 1911 Census for County Donegal.

The 1901 and 1911 Census for the Island of Ireland can be viewed online at www.census.nationalarchives.ie

Other census abstracts include the following:
- Abstracts from 1841 and 1851 census for County Donegal can be found in British Parliamentary Papers 1851 Census Ireland: Part 1 Ulster and Connacht: Area Population and Housing. This can also be viewed online at www.dippam.ac.uk
- [An Historical Account of the Plantation of Ulster at the Commencement of the Seventeenth Century 1608-1620 / George Hill, 1877]

Pynnar’s Survey 1618–1619
This survey was carried out between 1618 and 1619 and lists the English and Scottish landowners who were granted lands under the Plantation of Ulster. It details the acreage granted to each ‘Undertaker’, but also surveys the principal Irish tenants remaining on the fortified lands.

Muster Rolls 1630
Dating from 1630, it is the oldest census substitute held in Central Library. It is a list of the major landowners and of able-bodied men at arms (16-60 years) to be mustered to fight if needed, for the Crown.

The Civil Survey 1654–1656
The Civil Survey is a collation of landowner records based on parish and townland with written descriptions of the boundaries. The value of each townland is given as determined in 1641.

This documents census abstracts from Old Age Pension records.]
Pender’s Census c. 1659
This Census is also referred to as Petty’s or Pender’s Census. It provides townland census returns for most of Ireland. The returns supply the name of the principal occupiers of the land, referred to as ‘Tituldoes’. It is divided into barony, parish and townland and lists the number of English, Scottish and Irish in each townland. It is a particularly valuable source as it lists the principal Irish names and their frequency, by barony.
[A Census of Ireland circa 1659 / Seamus Pender, 1939]

Hearth Money Rolls 1660s
This is a list of householders liable to pay tax based on the number of hearths (a fireplace) per house, at a rate of two shillings per hearth. It lists the head of the household in each barony and parish liable to pay the tax.

Wills
Wills and testamentary records are an important resource as they provide evidence of the date of death and information relating to family members, place of residence and property.

Central Library holds the following three volumes of Abstracts of Wills at the Registry of Deeds:

- Abstract of Wills at the Registry of Deeds: Vol. 1 (1708-1745)
- Abstract of Wills at the Registry of Deeds: Vol. 2 (1746-1785)
- Abstract of Wills at the Registry of Deeds: Vol. 3 (1785-1832)

Calendars of Wills and Administrations 1858 – 1920 can be searched online at www.willcalendars.nationalarchives.ie

Spinning Wheel Premium Entitlement Lists 1796 (Flax List)
To encourage the linen industry in Ireland the Irish Linen Board awarded free spinning wheels to landholders based on the number of acres of flax planted. Entries are based on parish and the number of spinning wheels awarded to each landholder is listed.
The Tithe Applotment Books 1823–1838

The Tithe Applotments were compiled between 1823 and 1837 to determine the amount which occupiers of agricultural holdings, over one acre, were liable to pay in tithes to the Church of Ireland. The Tithe Applotment Books are arranged by parish and townland listing the name, the amount of land held and the sum to be paid. Because the tithes were levied on agricultural land, urban areas are not included.

Microfilmed copies are held in Central Library and are available online at www.titheapplotmentbooks.nationalarchives.ie.

Register of Deeds in County Donegal:
Freeholders 1760–1769

A freeholder can be described as a landholder who holds the land forever, but despite the word “free”, the freeholder was almost invariably required to pay rent or render service to a landlord. The Register of Freeholders alphabetically lists the names on the deeds of freeholders in Co. Donegal in the 1760s and 1770s followed by more specific details including the date of registration of the freehold.

Griffith’s Primary Valuation 1857–1858

Griffith’s Primary Valuation was the first standard valuation of all real property in Ireland and lists householders and lessors by townland, parish, poor law union, and barony. Central Library holds a full set of Valuation books for County Donegal. Valuation records and maps may be viewed online at www.askaboutireland.ie/griffith-valuation.
CHURCH RECORDS

Civil registration of births, deaths and marriages did not become compulsory in Ireland until 1864. Therefore Church records are an extremely valuable family history resource. Where these records are stored depends on religious denomination. It should also be noted that a lot of parish records are held locally in parish churches.

Church of Ireland

Church of Ireland Parish Registers for Inver, Mountcharles, Killaghtee and Killybegs are held on microfilm in Central Library.

Permission to print from these records must be obtained from the parish.

Church of Ireland records are held by the Representative Church Body Library:

www.ireland.anglican.org/about/rcb-library/catalogues/parish-records

A small number of Irish parish registers have been digitised and are available to view here and on the Anglican Record Project. This digital record is a work in progress.

www.ireland.anglican.org/about/rcb-library/anglican-record-project

Roman Catholic

Most of the surviving Roman Catholic parish registers prior to 1880 are held on microfilm by the National Library of Ireland. These have now been digitised and can be viewed online at www.registers.nli.ie

More recent records are held locally at the various parish churches.

www.churcharchives.ie/raphoe-diocesan-archives

Methodist

Methodism grew out of the Established Church with people joining the Wesleyan Methodist Society, but remaining in their own churches.

Methodists were expected to go to the parish church for the administration of baptism; therefore it is important to remember to check Church of Ireland records for the eighteenth century.

Many Methodist churches in Ulster (including Donegal) have had their records copied by PRONI (Public Record Office of Northern Ireland). These are to be found under reference codes MIC1E and CR6 www.nidirect.gov.uk/publications/proni-guide-church-records

Other records may be held locally or with the Methodist Historical Society of Ireland:

www.methodisthistoryireland.org

Wesley Historical Society:

www.wesleyhistoricalsociety.org.uk/genealogy.html
Presbyterian Church

The Public Record Office of Northern Ireland (PRONI) has microfilmed almost all of the Presbyterian registers in Ireland. A small number of pre-1900 registers and other records are held locally by the Ministers.
www.nidirect.gov.uk/proni

The Presbyterian Historical Society of Ireland also holds some congregational records. These can be found at www.presbyterianhistoryireland.com/collections/library/records

Religious and civil persecution resulting from the Penal Laws meant that many Presbyterian baptisms, marriages and burials were conducted by the Church of Ireland. Therefore it is important to remember to check Church of Ireland records into the eighteenth century. Burial registers for Presbyterian churches are uncommon as there were very few Presbyterian burial grounds.

The Central Library holds hard copy indexes to the following local Presbyterian Churches:

EMIGRATION

Passenger Lists

A number of passenger lists are held (mainly for vessels leaving Derry Port) and US immigration lists:

- Donegal Passengers on the Assisted Passenger List from Plymouth, England to Sydney, Australia (1848-1868), compiled by Richard Reid.
- Immigration of Irish Quakers into Pennsylvania 1682-1750 / Albert Cooke Myers, 1969.
Other lists include:

- Assisted immigrants from Donegal arriving in Lyttleton, New Zealand, 1855-1874.
- Passenger list of the “Invercargill”, which sailed to New Zealand 1878 (65 passengers from County Donegal).
- Passenger list of the “Franklin”, Londonderry to Wilmington, Delaware, USA, 1840.
- Passenger list of the “Caribou” arrived Sydney, Australia 4th October 1859.
- The Famine Immigrants, Lists of Irish immigrants arriving at the Port of New York [7 volumes, 1846-1851].
- The Search for Missing Friends: Irish immigrant advertisements placed in the Boston Pilot [8 volumes 1831 – 1920].

The Ulster American Folk Park Centre for Migration Studies has a database and genealogical information on emigrants from Ireland (mainly to USA) including passenger lists.

TRADE DIRECTORIES

By the 1820’s trade directories had begun to cover all of Ireland. Two of the most important are Pigot’s Directory and Slater’s Directory. Many of the towns and villages in Donegal are described in detail in both directories. Information includes location, parish, railway stations, churches, constabulary, courts and dispensaries. Trades and businesses are also listed for many locations.

Central Library holds a range of commercial directories, in both printed and microfiche formats.

- Pigot’s Directory of Ireland 1820, 1821, 1822 and 1824
- Slater’s Directory of Ireland 1846, 1856, 1870, 1881 and 1884
- Porter’s Guide to the Manufacturers and Shippers of Ireland / Frank Porter, 1908.

Maps form an important resource in family history research as they can often show the researcher the exact plot of land on which their ancestors lived and worked.

The following is a small sample of the maps held in Central Library:

- Ulster Maps 1609: Maps of the Escheated Counties in Ireland
- Barony and Parish Maps of Co. Donegal/Down Survey Maps 1655-56
- Grand Jury Maps 1834-1842
- Griffith’s Valuation 1857-58 Maps are viewable online at www.askaboutireland.ie/griffith-valuation

There are many other historical maps available in Central Library.
SCHOOLS FOLKLORE SCHEME 1937–38

In 1937 the Irish Folklore Commission in collaboration with the Department of Education introduced a scheme in which pupils were encouraged to collect and document folklore and local history. The result is a rich collection of local folklore, legends, songs, customs and beliefs, each specific to their own locality. While not every primary school in the country participated, the collection offers a rich source of local traditions. Many people have found pieces written by a family member.

A full list of participating schools in County Donegal is available in Central Library and many be viewed on microfilm.

The collection is also available online at https://www.duchas.ie/

JOURNALS

Central Library holds a large selection of current and historical journals; many of which contain information on local history useful to the family history researcher. Below are a few suggested titles:

- Béaloideas 1928 - 2018 (some volumes are missing)
- Clogher Record 1953 – 2012
- Donegal Annual 1947 – present
- Irish Family History 1985 – 2006
- Irish Roots [magazine]
- Ulster Folklife 1959 – 2015 (some volumes are missing)

Journals from the Irish Studies Collection on JSTOR are accessible online in all library branches at www.donegallibrary.ie/mainnavigation/onlinelibrary/research/
LOCAL HISTORY BOOKS

Donegal Library Service aims to collect and preserve all items written by Donegal authors, published in, or about, County Donegal. Family history research is intrinsically linked to local history; therefore this collection offers a valuable source of information and many researchers find that elusive nugget of information that finishes off the tremendous work they have put into tracing their family tree.

The following is just a sample of local history books available in Central Library:

- Ballyshannon Genealogy and History / Anthony Begley, 2011.
- History and Antiquities of Killybegs / Charles Conaghan, 1974.
- Convoy Village: Its People and Townlands / Aodh Gallagher and Marie Slevin, 1996.
- Mevagh Down the Years / Leslie Lucas, 1962.
- Inver Parish in History / Helen Meehan, 2005.
- Donegal History and Society / Liam Ronayne et al. (eds.), 1999.
- The Book of Inishowen / Harry Percival Swan, 1938.

Archives are documents of enduring value that provide evidence of the activities of a person or institution.

They can come in a wide range of formats including written, photographic, moving image, sound, digital and analogue.

The mission of Donegal County Archives is to preserve, acquire and make accessible the documented heritage of the county for the people of County Donegal, for present and future generations.

Donegal County Archives holds a wide variety of archival material useful for academics, local historians, genealogists and family history researchers.
Donegal County Archives, in partnership with Family History website, Find My Past, have digitised and published over 400,000 Donegal Workhouse records. The records consist of both transcripts and images of original admission and discharge registers as well as board of guardians’ minute books spanning the years 1840 to 1922.

The collection covers the unions of Ballyshannon, Donegal, Dunfanaghy, Glenties, Inishowen, Letterkenny, Milford and Stranorlar. As well as registers and minute books, there are accounts, death registers, letters, relief registers, supplier contracts and more.

Most features of this website can be accessed without charge at Donegal’s libraries and Archives. https://search.findmypast.com/search-ireland-records-in-institutions-and-organisations/and_workhouses-and-poor-law
Sources and Resources available in Donegal County Archives

Griffith’s topographical survey of the parishes of Donegal 1833 – 1859
The 52 handwritten survey booklets in this collection are of properties worth over £5 only. They include descriptions of quantity of land; rate per statute acre; amount (value) of land; and give the number of houses. If there are no houses worth over £5, there is a comment that ‘there are no houses in this townland worth £5 a year’.
An overall description of the land includes drainage, relief and soil quality. Other preliminary surveys including field and house books are available to view online at:
http://census.nationalarchives.ie/search/vob/home.jsp

General Valuation Registers, c.1917 to 1990
(Note: a few registers date from the 1890s. Survivals and dates vary).
These are the successive registers to the earlier Griffith’s Valuation. They contain lists of occupiers and owners of land and property in Donegal and detail how much each household had to pay in rates. They are indexed by electoral area and townland.
There are gaps in this collection. A more complete set is available to view at the Valuation Office in Dublin.
Electoral (voters’) registers, c.1880s – 1980s

The electoral system was reformed from 1898 to 1918, allowing more ordinary people to be included on the register. After 1898 women appear on registers as local government electors, as limited parliamentary electors after 1918 and as full electors after 1922. The survival rate for Co. Donegal’s electoral registers varies considerably. List of the registers held by date:

1886: Polling district of Carndonagh
1889: Polling districts of Newtowncunningham and Kilmacrennan; Ballyshannon
1894 – 1895: Polling districts of Dungloe, Dunfanaghy, Lifford, Letterkenny, Stranorlar, Churchill; South Donegal; Killybega; Pettigo
1898: Polling district of Ballintra

These lists give significant information including name, residence; nature of qualification, e.g. ‘rated occupied householder’, title or business. There are lists for most electoral areas or districts though dates for surviving records vary.

Donegal Grand Jury records: 1753 – 1899

Grand Juries existed in Ireland since Norman times. The Grand Jury in each county was made up of landowners, selected by the County Sheriff. Each Grand Jury was presided over by an Assize Judge and thus had no corporate existence. Assizes were held twice a year. Before the assizes, presentment sessions were called in each barony during which proposals for work to be done were considered and submitted to the Grand Jury for ratification. Services provided and paid for by Grand Jury Cess (a tax rate paid by occupiers) included making and repair of roads and bridges, construction of courthouses and levying for support of hospitals, schools and prisons.

Grand Juries’ administrative functions were abolished in 1898 to make way for the modern democratic system of local government in existence today.
Records include:
Presentments of works to be done by contractors for the Assizes. These give names of contractors on projects such as road and bridge work; hospitals; prisons; schools; for services including translation from the Irish language and for providing for ‘deserted children.’
Dates for surviving records: 1753 – 1769; 1768 – 1783; 1769 – 1778; 1793 – 1798; 1807 – 1808; 1809 – 1810; 1831; 1840; 1841; 1844; 1845; 1847; 1848; 1849; 1856; 1857; 1867; 1868; 1870; 1873; 1874; 1876; 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1886, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1894, 1898.

Poor Law Unions: Workhouses and Hospitals, 1840 - 1922
Under the Poor Law Act of 1838, Ireland was divided into Poor Law Unions or areas, each one run by a Board of Guardians. The principal responsibility of the boards was to supervise the running of the workhouses. There were eight workhouses in County Donegal, all built during the early 1840s - Ballyshannon, Donegal, Dunfanaghy, Glenties, Inishowen, Letterkenny, Milford and Stranorlar. The boards acquired other functions over the decades, including building and running fever hospitals, ensuring vaccination and managing dispensaries. The Workhouse system was abolished under the new Irish Free State in 1922.
Records include:
Minutes of meetings of Boards of Guardians who managed the workhouses, 1840 – 1922. The minutes contain the decisions made on matters including collection of rates, maintenance of the building, workhouse and hospital staff, suppliers, disciplinary issues, public health etc. Names referred to include the Guardians themselves, the Master, Matron, nurses, school teachers, wardens, rate collectors etc. Contractors such as suppliers of bread, oats, materials etc. are also mentioned. In some instances workhouse inmates are discussed, usually in connection with a disciplinary or administrative matter. In some minute books specific inmates are referred to as having been placed on lists for emigration under specific government emigration schemes.

Admission & Discharge Registers and Indoor/Outdoor Relief Registers
These give name, age and address (townland), religion, occupation etc, of individuals seeking relief; if infirm or ill; date of admission and discharge or death.
The following admission or relief registers survive:

(Strabane & Derry Workhouse records are held in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland).
Board of Health and Public Assistance, 1924 - 1942

The Board of Health & Public Assistance existed from 1924 to 1942. Following its dissolution, its functions were absorbed into the County Council. Surviving records include bound volumes containing the minutes of meetings of the Board and its sub-committees. These detailed minutes include correspondence and reference to payments to medical professionals for various duties, including maternity services and dispensary attendance; and other staff matters. Other issues include unemployment assistance; management of district hospitals; management of the County Home in Stranorlar; labourers’ cottages; boarding out (fostering) of children. Other Committees established under the Board include on subjects such as infectious diseases; school medical and milk schemes; fire fighting; water supply; sewerage. There are monthly reports of officers including the County Medical Officer, District Nurses and TB Officer.

About Donegal County Museum

Donegal County Museum is based in an old stone building, which was once part of the Letterkenny Workhouse, opened in 1845. The exhibition in the first floor gallery tells the story of County Donegal from Prehistory to the Twentieth century. In the ground floor gallery a series of temporary exhibitions are held throughout the year, which cover a wide range of topics. An event and education programme runs throughout the year on a wide variety of themes and topics.
The role of Donegal County Museum is to collect, record, preserve, communicate and display for the use and enjoyment of the widest community possible, the material evidence and associated information of the history of County Donegal.

Donegal County Museum houses a substantial collection of artefacts relating to the history and heritage of County Donegal. This collection represents a wide range of periods and topics. It is a good representative collection of the county, containing many interesting objects some of which are of national and international importance.

While Donegal County Museum is happy to provide guidance and assistance, it is not a genealogical institution and in general we cannot conduct detailed research for individuals.
Donegal County Museum has updated and reprinted a 5th Edition of the County Donegal Book of Honour: The Great War 1914-1918 which contains the names of all those from Donegal who died during World War I.

Donegal County Museum has been undertaking research on all those from Donegal involved in World War I since 2001. The Museum has previously organised exhibitions and a programme of events examining the story of Donegal’s role in the War.

Donegal County Museum has carried out extensive research on those from County Donegal who took part in World War I. They would be happy to assist you with any queries relating to Donegal and World War I.
